"Commander Read was responsible for setting up the Regulations Revisions Committee at Naval Headquarters and ultimately for the publication of the King's Regulations for the Canadian Naval Service. The zeal, energy and ability which he displayed in his work were an invaluable contribution to the Royal Canadian Navy."

Awarded Officer - Order of Canada (OC) as per Canada Gazette of 22 December 1973:

"For his contributions to scholarship and teaching and for this many services to the nation."

Commander Horace Emerson Read, OC, OBE

Horace Emerson Read was born on 08 April 1898, in Port Elgin, New Brunswick. In 1911 his family moved to Amherst, Nova Scotia, where he would graduate from high school at Cumberland County Academy in 1915. In October of the same year, Read entered Acadia University in Wolfville, Nova Scotia to obtain his Bachelor of Arts degree. Before he would finish his degree, Read enlisted for overseas service with the 219th Battalion of the Nova Scotia Highlanders, Canadian Expeditionary Force in 1916. In 1917 Read joined the Royal Air Force (then called the “Royal Flying Corps” until 1918) where he trained as a flying officer and was Captain in the Royal Air Force, British Expeditionary Force, until 1919. After the First World War had ended, Read returned to Acadia, and on May 24 ,1921, Read received his Bachelor of Arts degree, with distinction in Economics and English.

In 1921 Horace Read was accepted into the Harvard Business School, but before entering, Read had taken on a summer job as a reporter for the Amherst Daily News and was assigned to cover the Supreme Court. As a result, Read cancelled his reservation at Harvard and decided to enter Dalhousie Law School in September, 1921. Read graduated from Law School in 1924 and after a short career in the practice of law, he was admitted to the Nova Scotia Bar on May 13, 1924. Shortly after, Read was awarded a Pugsley Scholarship in International Law at Harvard Law School and set out to work on his LL.M. in the fall of 1924. In September of 1925, Read returned to Halifax to begin his career as a lecturer in law at Dalhousie University. In December of the same year, Horace married Helena Louise Miller of Windsor, Nova Scotia and eventually fathered two children, Aveleigh Ann and Robert.

From 1931 to 1934 Read served as George Munro Professor of Law at Dalhousie where he taught Property I and II, Equity, Trusts, Bills and Notes, Banking, Conflicts, International Law, and Roman Law. Taking a year leave of absence from Dalhousie in 1933, Read returned to Harvard to obtain his S.J.D. degree in which he wrote his doctoral thesis on “The Recognition of Foreign Judgments in the British Commonwealth at Common Law”. On May 31, 1934 (while still a doctoral student at Harvard), Read was offered a position on the Minnesota law faculty to introduce a course on legislation-the first of its kind in the United States. In 1934, Read was admitted into the Minnesota Bar, and in 1948 to 1949, served as vice-chairman of the legislative committee of the Minnesota State Bar Association and was member of the Judicature Society of the Association of American University Professors. Horace remained professor of law at the University of Minnesota until 1950.

During the Second World War, Read served as a Major in the Minnesota wing of the United States Civil Air Patrol from 1941 to 1943. At the request of his colleague and friend, Angus L. Macdonald (then Minister of National Defence for Naval Services), Horace joined the Royal Canadian Navy Volunteer Reserve as Commander. With the rank as Commander, Read became chairman of the Naval Regulations Revision Committee and served as a principal architect in the revision of the Naval Regulations (K.R.C.N.), as well as the draftsman of the Naval Service Act of Canada in 1944. Read also served as chairman of the Canadian Naval Orders Committee from 1944-1945. As a result for his work directing the revisions of naval regulations, he was awarded the Order of British Empire in 1946.

In 1950, Read accepted an offer to become Richard Chapman Weldon Professor of Law and Dean of the Faculty of Law at Dalhousie University on the terms that a Nova Scotia Centre for Legislative Research be established. In 1964, after being appointed Dean Emeritus of Law and Sir James Dunn Professor of Law, Read accepted the role of Vice-President of Dalhousie University until 1969 when he stepped down to pursue teaching full-time until 1972.

On February 26, 1975, Horace Read died at the Victoria General Hospital in Halifax at the age of 78.

In addition to the aforementioned professional memberships, Read was chairman of the Nova Scotia Labour Board; ex officio member of Council of the Nova Scotia Barristers’ Society; Vice-President for Nova Scotia of the Canadian Bar Association; President of the Conference of Governing Bodies of the Legal Profession in Canada; President of the Conference of Commissioners on Uniformity of Legislation in Canada; President of Canadian Law Teachers; Vice-President of the International Law Association, Chairman Committee on Foreign Judgments; chairman of the Nova Scotia Royal Commission on Automobile Insurance and; was hired by the United Nations to be the observer of the 1958 Costa Rica national election and consultant on electoral law.

Read was also recipient of four honorary degrees from Acadia University, Queen's University; Dalhousie University, and Windsor University, and was appointed to the Order of Canada in 1973. Read's major publications include, "Cases on Canadian Law of Personal Chattels" (1931; 1940), "Cases on Equity" (1932), "Cases and Other Materials on Legislation" (1948; 1959), "Cases and Other Materials on the Common Law of Contracts in Canada" (1955), and "Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Judgements in the British Commonwealth" (1938).

RICHARDS, Harold Douglas, Chief Stoker, DSM (21925) - BAR to Distinguished Service Medal (DSM*) - RCN / HMCS Haida - Awarded as per Canada Gazette of 20 January 1945 and London Gazette of 14 November 1944.

"For courage and determination in H.M. Ships Albright, Ashanti, Bellona, Diadem, Mauritius, Onslow, Tartar and Ursa and H.M. Canadian Ships Assiniboine, Haida, Iroquois, Qu'Appelle, Restigouche and Skeena, in a series of successful attacks on enemy escorted convoys off the coast of France."

On the night of 5-6 August 1944, four Tribal Class Destroyers were southbound in the bay of Biscay when they detected a small convoy, also on a southerly course, presumably headed for Spain. HMS Tartar, HMS Ashanti, HMCS Haida and HMCS Iroquois manoeuvred to a favourable position and attacked, sinking six of the seven ships, including the escort. Returning northward, ships were detected leaving St. Nazaire and the order was given: "All guns loaded". Able Seaman Michael Kerwin was a member of the crew of HMCS Haida's 'Y' Mounting, twin 4.7 inch, on the quarterdeck. Unknown to anyone, the right gun was still hot from the previous action. Before the breech was fully closed, the charge ignited, blew back the breech, which collapsed the tray and there was a cordite fire. As OOO Torpedo Tubes, I (Lloyd I Jones) thought the ship had been hit. The port side was impassable due to the fire but the starboard side was free. At 'Y' Mounting, two were killed and eight wounded. One of the wounded was AB Kerwin, who also suffered burns and temporary blindness. However, he heard the gun trainer, AB Jack (Guns) Burnett, calling for help from the forward part of the gun shield and he plunged through dense smoke and flames, found his shipmate and hauled him to safety. In due course, he was awarded the Conspicuous Gallantry Medal. I must add that Chief Stoker Harold D. Richard, RCN, did a marvelous job with a fire hose, which he brought into operation almost immediately. With the spray nozzle going, he soaked everyone including me and had the cordite fire out in short order. He was awarded the Bar to the Distinguished Service Medal. We then carried the wounded to the Sick Bay, passed the good ammunition to the forward guns and kicked the burnt cordite cartridges overboard." (Lloyd I. Jones in 'Starshell', October 1989.)

ROBARTS, John Parmeter, Lieutenant - Mention in Despatches - RCNVR at Salerno - Awarded as per Canada Gazette of 24 June 1944 and London Gazette of 23 May 1944.

Born: 11 January 1917, Banff, Alberta

Home: London, Ontario (moved there in 1931).

John Parmeter Roberts served in the RCNVR from 1940 through 1945.

One of the Canadians trained in England at HMS Raleigh, he had sea time in the heavy cruiser HMS Norfolk before doing officer training at HMS King Alfred.

The 1943 & 44 Canadian Navy Lists show him as a qualified fighter direction officer serving with the RN (by then he was a Lieutenant with seniority 31 Dec 42).

Lieutenant Roberts was Mentioned in Despatches for the 1943 landings at Salerno.

Lt Roberts subsequently served as a fighter direction officer in HMCS Uganda in the Pacific in 1945.

Presumably his M.I.D. was for service in an RN cruiser or other heavy unit at Salerno where his qualification as a fighter direction officer was used.

After being discharged from the Navy he studied law at Osgoode Hall in Toronto in 1947 and embarked on his political career.

He was the Premier of Ontario from 1961-1970.

The following is from Public Triumph Private Tragedy:
The Double Life of John P. Roberts, By Steve Paikin, Viking Canada

Robarts possessed all the attributes to ensure political and social success. A 1939 graduate of the University of Western Ontario, he received his law degree from Osgoode Hall, in Toronto, in 1947. Elected Alderman in London in 1950. Lured into provincial politics, he won the 1951 election for the riding of London North and won again, in 1955, when he defeated Clarence Peterson, father of future premier David Peterson, an opponent Robarts later described as "the finest man I ever faced in my life."

In 1959 Robarts became minister of education -- after finance, the most important portfolio in government. It was a ministry that suited him and he invested heavily in the province's school system, adjusting a complex system of universities and community colleges and reorganizing the administration of schools. In 1961, at the age of 44, he became premier of Ontario and his private life took a fatal turn.

Although the position of premier made a move to Toronto obligatory, Robarts' taciturn wife, Norah McCormick, refused to move. Totally uninterested in the role of consort to the head of government, Norah insisted on remaining in London. She would continue the couple's busy social life from her home on the Parkway and her cottage at Grand Bend and would continue to play bridge, twice weekly, with friends. The Robarts' two adopted children, Robin and Tim, would remain with their mother.

"Robarts was effectively stuck in Toronto all week long and would only come home to London on weekends. He put his law partnership in mothballs and bought a first-class ticket on the roller coaster that is politics, which was about to consume his life."

Not surprisingly, Paikin's account of Robarts' private follies and of the disasters that marked his final years, is absorbing reading. It veers from government accomplishment to a People magazine review of the high life; from Queen's Park to expensive bars and nightclubs, from staid London and a staid and domineering spouse to a glamorous trophy wife 28 years the premier's junior. And as both Robarts and Norah became increasingly alcoholic, son Tim became reclusive and difficult to manage. It was an explosive situation.

But before Robarts's life unravelled, there were the achievements: legal aid, anti-pollution legislation, a network of social assistance programs and the Big Blue Machine's smooth transition from a Tory government run by John P. Robarts to another headed by rising political star, William G. Davis.

After retirement from office, there were the "rainmaker" years with the Toronto law firm Stikeman Elliott, his star turn on the board of directors of the Toronto Blue Jays and his appointment as co-chair of the Pepin-Roberts Task Force on Canadian Unity following the upset victory of Rene Levesque and the Parti Quebecois in the 1976 Quebec election.

Alan Eagleson once described Robarts as both a man's man and a lady's man -- traits which would, in the end, prove the premier's undoing. His hard driving hunting-fishing-womanizing style caught up with him and when son Tim committed suicide in 1977, at the age of 21, Robarts was devastated. A family friend blamed the death on "a lethal combination." Tim, she told Paikin, "was faced with an increasingly irrational mother, a largely absent father, too much money, no responsibility, drugs, and access to firearms."

On his retirement in 1971, he joined a number of boards of large corporations, served as chancellor of University of Western Ontario and later of York University, chaired a royal commission on Metropolitan Toronto (1975-76) and co-chaired with J.L. Pepin the Task Force on Canadian Unity (1977-79).

In 1981 he suffered a series of strokes while travelling in the US.

After a lengthy program of rehabilitation, five years after his son's death and after four debilitating strokes, Robarts, too, took his own life on 18 October 1982.

Citation to George Medal of Commander Owen Connor Struan Robertson, OC, GM, RD, RCN

"For distinguished service in taking over command of a vessel, loaded with explosives, which caught fire in Bedford Basin, Halifax, in 1943, when the officers and crew had abandoned efforts to save the ship. Commander Robertson directed the fighting of the fire with complete disregard for his personal safety, and brought the ship down harbour, finally beaching her. Due to his efforts, a major explosion in the harbour was avoided and the ship was salvaged."

Commander Owen Connor Struan Robertson, six-feet-seven and known throughout the service as "long Robbie" was the Commander of the Dockyard at Halifax. At 0720 hours on 3 November 1943, he was informed that the U.S. Freighter S.S. Volunteer was on fire in the harbour and loaded with ammunition. Twenty-six years earlier, the Mont Blanc had destroyed much of Halifax and it was 36 year old Robertson's job to prevent it from happening again.

The S.S. Volunteer carried more than 500 tons of light ammunition, some 2,000 drums of highly combustible magnesium, and 1,800 tons of heavy howitzer ammunition, plus depth charges and cases of dynamite. At 0515 hours, a stoker in the engine room attempted to raise steam but accidentally detonated the burners causing the fuel lines to rupture and flaming oil to be spewed out. The Master, The Chief Officer, Chief Engineer and Second Engineer were playing poker in the Master's cabin and had consumed a fair amount of alcohol. The Radio Officer tried to contact Turtle Head (Naval Signal Station) but sent out the signal on the wrong wave length and aimed his lamp in the wrong direction. At 0650 hours, the American crew, seeing that their officers were incapacitated, abandoned ship.

While the Fireboat Rouille was pumping foamite into the stokehold, Commander Robertson boarded the S.S. Volunteer and went to the Captain's cabin. Finding most of the crew gone and the officers drunk, Robertson pulled on an oxygen mask and asbestos hood and climbed down into the stokehold. After assessing the situation, he returned to the Master's cabin to obtain the cargo contents and distribution list. With no help from the Master, he found the list but explosions now began in Number Three Hold.

Along with Stoker William Carson (awarded the British Empire Medal), Lieutenant Charles Spinney (awarded a Mention in Despatches) and William Cody of the National Harbour Board's Fire Department, Robertson tried to get the Master to allow the Number Three Hold to be flooded. The Master refused permission so Robertson called for the U.S. Naval Liaison Officer and began rigging hoses to flood Number Three Hold.

Lieutenant-Commander E.F.B. Watts, Senior Boarding Officer in Halifax and Lieutenant-Commander Stanley, USN, arrived. The Master was still trying to give orders but Stanley stripped him of his command, took command himself and turned full control over to Robertson.

Further inspection of the ship showed that the fire was spreading to Number Two Hold and Robertson decided to remove the ship from the harbour. Tugs were called in to the S.S. Volunteer to McNab Island where the sea bed off Mauger's Beach dipped into a trough.

However, before this could be done safely, something had to be done about the buildup of cordite fumes that threatened to blow up the ship immediately. Robertson and his party went below deck to stack tobacco bales around the drums of magnesium. Holes were cut in the main deck above the magnesium and Robertson fired a rifle at the magnesium drums. They exploded with flames shooting high into the air through the vent holes. About ten minutes passed before the noise and flames subsided. Robertson again went below to assess the situation and determined the immediate danger of an explosion had passed.

The S.S. Volunteer was towed to Mauger's Beach on the south end of McNab Island and Robertson and his men opened the sea cocks at 1545 hours. With the S.S. Volunteer fully beached by 1600 hours, Robertson left the ship, a second Halifax explosion averted. From "1000 Brave Canadians".

RUNDLE, George Henry Olaf, Lieutenant - George Medal - RCNR / Render Mine Safe Officer Halifax

Home: St. John, New Brunswick. Retired on 19 March 1946.

RUNDLE, George Henry Olaf, 0-64270, Lt(Temp) [15.1.42] RCNR

GM-[16.10.43] (see 8 Jun 43)

Bar to GM-[16.6.45] HMC Diving Tender No. 5, CO, (15.10.45-?)

Demobilized [19.3.46]

"For displaying gallantry, skill and coolness in carrying out hazardous duties."

Lieutenant George Rundle was aboard ML-053 in a sweeper flotilla operating off of Halifax, Nova Scotia, between 5 June - 12 June 1943. Mines were found on two occasions and towed to the beach at Ketch Harbour, near Halifax. On 8 June, Lieutenant Rundle with the assistance of Leading Seaman Lancien (awarded the British Empire Medal), removed the access plate to the mine, cut the electrical wiring and extracted the detonator and primer. He repeated this procedure on 11 June 1943. This is from page 82 "Salty Dips Volume 1".

The "Canadian Geographical Journal Volume LXIV No. 1" gives an expanded version of this episode.

"When the German Navy tried to bottle up our eastern ports with concentrations of mines laid by large submarines, the Fairmiles, working in the face of great danger, accomplished their task with despatch and ingenuity.

On 1 June 1943, the first mine was discovered in the approaches to Halifax Harbour, and before the day had ended, three floating mines had been sunk by gunfire. Our minesweepers immediately swept and buoyed a safe channel by which vessels could enter and leave Halifax. However, on 3 June 1943, the Panamanian motor ship Halma, of 2,937 tons, approaching outside the swept channel, was sunk.

Although it was suspected that the mines might be magnetic, it was not yet known what type they were. The Hague Convention required that mines when broken loose from their mooring should automatically become harmless, but there was no knowing whether such niceties of warfare were being practised or whether the mines were time-fuzed to explode after surfacing. It was therefore of vital importance to recover a mine intact to determine the characteristics.

On 7 June 1943, ML Q-053, commanded by Sub-Lieutenant George M. Schuthe, RCNVR, followed the minesweeper HMCS Red Deer on her sweeps and saw three mines exploding but failed to pick up a floating one. However, the next day, ML Q-053 again followed the sweepers and at 1815 hours sighted a mine cut loose by Byms 989, a British Motor Minesweeper. After careful approach, a tow-line 90 yards long was made fast and the mine towed by ML Q-053 to a suitable protected beach at Ketch Harbour fifteen and a half miles away.

During the long tow, the mine might have detonated at any moment and all hands on board ML Q-053 were kept forward under cover. At 1950 hours, the tow-line was transferred to the shore and the mine hauled onto the beach, whereupon, Lieutenant G.H.O. Rundle, RCNR, the Render Mine Safe Officer, assisted by Ordinary Seaman Lancien proceeded to remove the plate-securing nuts with wrenches, cut inside wiring with snipers and remove the detonator. As daylight faded at 2052 hours, on a signal that the mine was rendered safe, the remainder of the shore party came from their protected position on the cliff side and assisted in removing the primer and mine mechanism. On 11 June 1943, another mine was recovered by ML Q-053 and rendered safe." Also found on page 130 of '1000 Brave Canadians'.

RUNDLE, George Henry Olaf, Lieutenant, GM - BAR to George Medal (GM) - RCNR

- Awarded as per Canada Gazette of 16 June 1945 and London Gazette of 14 June 1945.

"For great courage, coolness and skill in recovering and rendering safe two enemy mines under extreme difficulties, experienced as a result of darkness and the nature of the beach. This Officer was granted the George Medal on 16 October 1943."

From the Report of Proceeding for the month of July, 1942, by Commander of the Port, St. John's, this extract provides more details:

"Following report of mines having been washed up at various points on the coast of Newfoundland, Mate G.H.O. Rundle, RCNR, of HMCS Cornwallis, accompanied by one rating joined S.S. Kyle at Corner Brook and recovered mines at Quirpon, Horse Islands and La Scie. All of these proved to be British mark XX antenna mines and were rendered safe. On Mate Rundle's arrival in St. John's, he proceeded to Change Islands with the Harbour Craft Miss Kelvin and recovered a further mine of a similar type. It is considered that his work was very well handled indeed by Mate Rundle and the long journey to Change Islands by Harbour Craft reflects great credit both upon him and the boat's crew. Quirpon is in the northeasternmost post of Newfoundland; Horse Island is off White Bay; Lac Scie is near Cape St. John and Change Island near Hamilton Sound. Described on page 140 of '1000 Brave Canadians'.

"For exceptional devotion and competency over a long period. It is considered fitting at this time to recognize the outstanding contribution now being made to the Royal Canadian Navy by its Nursing Service. Non-existent at the commencement of the war, there are now over one hundred Nursing Sisters, Technicians and Dietitians rendering service of the highest calibre. Created during a period fraught with great difficulties, and at a time when the whole Service was undergoing unprecedented expansion, the outstanding success of the Royal Canadian Naval Nursing Service is in no small measure attributable to the tireless devotion and inspiring example of these two officers (Matron Mrs. Evelyn Isabel Stibbard was the other)."
