BARS

All NATO medals have a bar except the Former Yugoslavia Republic of Macedonia.

The tour numerals are Arabic script and made of bronze.

A bronze, Arabic numeral (identical in style to the silver numerals now affixed to the United Nations medals) will be worn below the bar and on the ribbon in undress for second and subsequent service of an additional 180 days of qualifying service. MOUNTING

A solid loop (4-mm x 4-mm) on the top of the medal has a large ring (15-mm diameter) running through it and through this ring the ribbon passes.

RIBBON

The ribbon is different for each of the medals. It is 38-mm wide and is a combination of NATO blue (a bright blue technical title - Pantone 294) or dark blue and white, the white representing peace. Article 5 medals have one or two gold stripes to represent Article 5 operations. Non Article 5 ribbons have one or two silver stripes signifying that the operation was ordered in accordance with one of the other articles of NATO and not Article 5 of the North Atlantic Treaty.

NOTE

The medal may be awarded posthumously to any person killed on active service assigned to an NATO authorized operation.

POSTNOMINALS

The use of a post-nominal is not authorized for this medal.

NOTE

The NATO Medals initially came after the other non-UN medals for Canadians but currently come after the United Nations Medals.

NOTE

NATO Meritorious Service Medal

TERMS

The medal is NATO's most prestigious award and is limited to a total of 50 recipients a year across the Alliance. It was first awarded in 2003 to commend NATO staff whose personal initiative and dedication went beyond their duty to make a difference both to their colleagues, and to NATO as an organization. The Medal is the personal Award of The Secretary General of NATO who signs each citation. It can be awarded to military and civilian staff alike. The main criteria taken into consideration are: the performance of acts of courage in difficult or dangerous circumstances; showing exceptional leadership or personal example; making an outstanding individual contribution to a NATO sponsored program or activity; or enduring particular hardship or deprivation in the interest of NATO.

Canada's contribution to Task Force Aviano consisted of 18 fighters and about 300 personnel from 24 March to 10 June 1999 during the bombing of Yugoslavia by Allied Force with Canadian pilots completing a total of 678 combat sorties. During this period, the NATO Medal (Bar Kosovo was awarded). Aircrew receive the medal for 15 combat sorties and ground crew receive the medal if they were present for the 79 days the bombings occurred. However, if personnel only served the 79 days, they are not entitled to the Peacekeeping Medal as this medal is not awarded for hostile actions. Translation: it is possible to be awarded the NATO Medal with bar Kosovo and not receive the Peacekeeping medal for 79 days service. Aircrew who do not qualify for the 15 combat sorties will accumulate one day's qualifying service for the first sortie flown of any day. Additional sorties flown on the same day receive no further credit. This requirement exists for support as well as combat aircraft. Support aircraft include tanker, airlift and surveillance platforms. Canada withdrew all CF-18 aircraft in December 2000 and remaining CF personnel were in support of the SFOR.

BAR

NATO MANDATE

Insurgents agreed to the weapons collection plan and to voluntarily hand-in their weapons. Part of this plan was a list of weapons and ammunition which the insurgents committed to provide as one of their obligations as a confidence-building measure and one element of a broader peace plan proposed by President Trajkovski. TFH accepted what was passed in within the established timeframe. In accordance with the agreement between the ethnic Albanian insurgents and the government of the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, it was the responsibility of the insurgents to de-mine weapons caches and bring any hidden weapons to the collection sites. TFH's only mandate was to collect weapons that were voluntarily turned in by the armed extremists; the responsibility to ensure a safe and secure environment remained with the government of the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

CANADIAN CONTRIBUTION to OPERATION EAGLE ASSIST

After the terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001, the United States requested the assistance of its NATO partners, invoking Article 5 of the Treaty (which indicates that an attack on one member is an attack on all). The request was for NATO Airborne Early Warning Force (NAEWF) aircraft assistance in the aerial surveillance of the continental United States. The North Atlantic Council (NAC) agreed to the request on 4 October, with five NATO E3A aircraft starting operations on 9 October under the name Operation EAGLE ASSIST.

The NATO aircraft operated from Tinker Air Force base in Oklahoma, home of the USAF AWACS wing. Two hundred personnel from Geilenkirchen, Germany were stationed at Tinker at a time. In January 2002, two additional NATO E3As deployed to the United States.

In April 2002, on the basis of an improved homeland security posture, the United States indicated that further support from the NATO E3As would not be required. On 30 April the NAC announced that it had agreed to terminate Op EAGLE ASSIST effective 16 May 2002. Canadians made up approximately 90 of the over 830 members of the NAEWF participated in the operation, flying over 4300 hours and 360 sorties.

This requirement exists for support as well as combat aircraft, support aircraft including tanker, airlift and surveillance platforms.

NOTE: Service under Operation KOBOLD qualifies for this medal from August 2008 to the present. In 2015, there were 5 CF personnel in Pristina, Kosovo, performing logistics and headquarters support functions.

NATO MANDATE

On 14 December 1995 North Atlantic Council launched the largest military operation ever undertaken by the Alliance, Operation Joint Endeavour. Based on UN Security Council Resolution 1031, NATO was given the mandate to implement the military aspects of the Peace Agreement. A NATO-led multinational force, called the Implementation Force (IFOR), started its mission on 20 December 1995. IFOR was given a one-year mandate.

After the peaceful conduct of the September 1996 elections, IFOR successfully completed its mission of implementing the military annexes of the General Framework Agreement for Peace. However, it was clear that much remained to be accomplished on the civil side and that the political environment would continue to be potentially unstable and insecure. On 25-26 September, one week after the Bosnian elections NATO Defence Ministers concluded that the Alliance needed to re-assess how it might continue to provide support for the establishment of a secure environment after the end of IFOR's mandate in December. The role of IFOR (Operation Joint Endeavour) was to implement the peace. The role of SFOR (Operation Joint Guard / Operation Joint Forge) was to stabilize the peace. The difference between the tasks of IFOR and SFOR is reflected in their names. On 12 December 1996, SFOR was authorized to implement the military aspects of the Peace Agreement as the legal successor to IFOR. Like IFOR, SFOR operates under Chapter VII of the UN Charter (peace enforcement).

Operation BRONZE saw the deployment of teams of Canadian Forces members serving in key positions at NATO Headquarters Sarajevo (NHQSa). It operated from 31 December 2004 to 31 March 2010.

Operation KOBOLD is the deployment of up to 10 Canadian Forces members to Pristina, Kosovo, to serve with the NATO-led Kosovo Force (KFOR). Launched in August 2008 with an initial mandate of one year, Operation KOBOLD was most recently extended to 31 December 2014. As part of Operation Kobold, Task Force Pristina comprises up to 10 Canadian Forces members in two teams: Four officers in various fields serving with the Military-Civil Advisory Division of KFOR, which co-ordinates efforts to support the new Kosovo Security Force (KSF) act as mentor; One Canadian Forces Officer serving with the NATO Advisory Team, which assists the civilian officials of the KSF Ministry and; the Canadian Forces Movement Detachment which has up to five RCAF Traffic Technicians serving with the Movement Control Multinational Integrated Logistics Unit, which coordinates the movement of equipment and materiel as part of efficient logistics support to KFOR units.

This medal replaces the NATO medals for the Former-Yugoslavia, Kosovo and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

With the creation of this medal, NATO has abolished the practice of issuing tour numerals to recognize more than one tour with NATO forces. The "NON ARTICLE FIVE" medal will be issued once to recognize all service in the Balkans, regardless of the number of tours a member serves.

NATO no longer recognizes service in support areas such as Italy, Greece, Hungary and Austria as qualifying time towards the "NON ARTICLE FIVE" medal. A member must serve thirty days in the theatre of operations to qualify for the medal.

NATO MANDATE

The International Security Assistance Force (ISAF), often called the Coalition Forces, is a NATO-led security mission in Afghanistan that was established by the United Nations Security Council in December 2001 by Resolution 1386 as envisaged by the Bonn Agreement. Its main purpose is to train the Afghan National Security Forces (ANSF) and assist Afghanistan in rebuilding key government institutions but is also engaged in the 2001 to present war with insurgent groups.

ISAF was initially charged with securing Kabul and surrounding areas from the Taliban, al Qaeda, and factional warlords, so as to allow for the establishment of the Afghan Transitional Administration. In October 2003, the UN Security Council authorized the expansion of the ISAF mission throughout Afghanistan, and ISAF subsequently expanded the mission in four main stages over the whole of the country. From 2006 to 2011, ISAF had been involved in increasingly more intensive combat operations in southern and eastern Afghanistan.

Troop contributors include from the USA, United Kingdom, NATO Member states (including Canada) and a number of other countries. The intensity of the combat faced by contributing nations varies greatly, with the United States, United Kingdom, and Canada sustaining the majority of casualties in intensive combat operations, with other contributors sustaining significantly less. As of early 2010, there were at least 700 military bases inside Afghanistan but more were expected to be built in the coming years. About 400 of these were used by U.S.-led NATO forces and 300 by ANSF.

CANADIAN AUTHORITY and CONTRIBUTION

The mission began as Canada fulfilled their NATO obligation to assist a NATO country that had been attacked and in the early years their main goal was to help train Afghan National Army and police, facilitate reconstruction, and provide security. In 2006, Canada took on an increasingly offence role moving to Kandahar Province.

INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION OF CONTROL AND SUPERVISION VIET NAM 1973
ICCS
Operation Gallant

TERMS

The ICCS medal was awarded for 90 days service with the Commission between 28 January 1973 and 31 July 1973 (184 days in total). This 1,160 member Commission was composed of Canada, Hungary, Indonesia and Poland and their role was to monitor the cease-fire in South Vietnam as per the Paris Peace Conference. The Commission arranged the release and exchange of more than 32,000 prisoners of war.

Canada sent 240 Military Personnel and 50 officials from the Department of External Affairs. The ICCS operated until 30 April 1975; two years after the Canada withdrew.

DESCRIPTION

A circular, bright gold medal, 36-mm in diameter

OBVERSE

The symbols of the four contributing countries are displayed in the centre with the Canadian Maples Leaf in the left upper position, Hungarian coat-of arms, Polish Eagle and the Indonesian coat-of arms making up the other three symbols. Around the edge are the words: INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION OF CONTROL AND SUPERVISION.

REVERSE

The reverse has a wreath of laurel around the edge and the legend in three lines: SERVICE / VIETNAM / 17 - 1 - 1973.

MOUNTING

It is the mounting that gives it the 'cracker Jack box' appearance. There is a small ring welded to the top of the medal. A small ring passes through this ring and attaches the medal to a ring at the bottom end of a thin laurel bar.

RIBBON

The ribbon is 38-mm wide and consists of nine equal stripes: red, white, red, white, light green (centre), white, red, white, and red.

NAMING

The medals were issued unnamed.

ISSUED

There were 384 medals to Canadians issued as follows:

352 to observers and support staff of the Canadian Forces
(248 of them Observers)

32 to civilians (these were the Canadian produced medals)

⁵

NOTES: The medal issued to Canadians can be distinguished from those of the other three countries by a small maple leaf at the top of the laurel ring on the reverse side.

At a reunion of the ISCS members, Michal Gauvin, OC, CVO, DSO, was asked why he was not wearing his ISCS medal. He explained that he was in Vietnam as a civilian and only the military received the ISCS medal. The Foreign Affairs Minister, the Right Honourable Joe Clark, then ordered that Canada reproduce the medal and that these medals be presented to all the civilians involved in the ISCS operation. The Canadian medal was of a much better quality than the initial medals issued to the CF members.

The Canadian issue differed from the original 1973 version in many ways, the medal is thicker, it has a solid straight suspender bar and claw and the reverse features a maple leaf above the words Vietnam 17-1-73. The revamped Canadian issue was designed by Bruce Beatty and was manufacture by Rideau of St. Laurent Quebec. It is issued in a black leatherette case similar to those the Canadian Exemplary medals are awarded in.
