"For courage and seamanship in bringing their ship, HMCS Athabaskan safely to port after she was damaged."

While on patrol in the Bay of Biscay Patrol area at 1300 Hours on 27 August 1943, HMCS Athabaskan was attacked by eighteen enemy Dornier-217s. HMS Egret (British Sloop) was sunk. A glide bomb hit HMCS Athabaskan at the junction of "B" gun-deck and the wheel-house. It passed under the plot room, through the Chief Petty Officer's Mess, and out the starboard side. It exploded barely a few feet beyond and bomb fragments pierced HMCS Athabaskan's side and bridge in a number of places. The Captain, Commander Miles was knocked down by the blast and several officers, including Lieutenant-Commander Dunn Lanthier and Sub-Lieutenant John A. Brebner had severe leg injuries. Able Seaman Joseph McGrath, a bridge lookout, died the next day. The crew of "B" gun bore the worst of the injuries with Able Seaman William Pickett and Petty Officer Ernest Latimer being killed. Leading Seaman John Gordon took charge despite the fact that he was injured and several others were burned. Several members of "A" gun were also burned and wounded. Leading Cook Frank Prudhomme also died. HMCS Athabaskan took on board the 35 survivors from HMS Egret. HMCS Athabaskan continued on at 14 knots, correcting a serious list to starboard. The ship sailed into port on 30 August 1943 under her own power. The ship was battered but not broken. See the book "Unlucky Lady".

CALDWELL, John Birch, Lieutenant-Commander (E) - Member - Order of the British Empire (MBE)
 - RCN / HMCS Uganda (now Senior Engineer Officer HMC Dockyard Halifax) - Awarded as per Canada Gazette of 15 June 1946 and London Gazette of 13 June 1946.

"Lieutenant-Commander Caldwell is an outstanding Engineering Officer of marked ability, both in administration duties and practical engineering. He served with distinction as Engineer Officer of HMCS Athabaskan when bombed off the coast of France, and as Senior Engineer Officer of HMCS Uganda. In his present appointment, Chief Engineer of His Majesty's Canadian Dockyard, Halifax, he displayed tact, firmness and organizing ability with the personnel serving under him."

Details of the sinking of HMCS Athabaskan which was torpedoed by German Destroyer T-24 on 29 March 1944 in the English Channel can be found in "The Canadian Naval Chronicle 1939 - 1945", Chapter 40.

"For outstanding leadership, skill and devotion to duty in HMS Icarus and H.M. Canadian Ships Chilliwack, Chaudiere, Fennel, Gatineau and St. Catherines in a successful operation against a U-Boat."

HMCS St. Catherines, HMCS Gatineau, HMCS Chaudiere, and HMCS Chilliwack assisted in sinking U-744 in mid-Atlantic on 6 March 1944 as described in Chapter 34 of "The Canadian Naval Chronicle 1939-1945". HMCS Gatineau was about to leave the east-bound convoy because of a distiller defect when it obtained a contact. HMCS St. Catharines, the senior ship, carried out a depth charge attack with HMCS Chilliwack joining in followed by HMCS Gatineau. HMCS Gatineau had to break off the attack but Chilliwack, Fennel and St. Catherines stayed right on throughout the action almost from the moment of its first appearance until it finally broke surface. HMCS Chilliwack was the first to spot it when it did come up, and closed in a full speed. Soon the other vessels were pouring fire around the U-Boat which was so concentrated that the U-Boat crew never had a chance to man its guns. The first salvo from Chilliwack's 4" gun wiped out a twin mounting right off the conning tower and killed the U-Boat captain who was the first to emerge from the hatch. HMCS Chaudiere rescued German submariners and Canadians who were thrown into the water when three of the motorboats and whalers launched to rescue the submariners were overturned in the waves.

CHAPMAN, Neil Henley, Sub-Lieutenant - Mention in Despatches - RCNVR / HMCS Sackville - Awarded as per Canada Gazette of 21 November 1942 and London Gazette of 18 November 1942.
He became a physician (OB/GYN) in Montreal. He died there on February 8, 1993.

"This officer organized and trained the depth charge party and brought it to a high degree of proficiency. In an engagement with an enemy U-Boat, he carried out his duties as Depth Charge Officer with alertness and effect and in skilfully directing a depth charge attack made a substantial contribution to the result of the action."

Details of Canadian Escort Group C-3 (one of which was HMCS Sackville, (Flower Class Corvette - K181) sinking U-588 in mid-Atlantic on 31 July 1942 can be found in Chapter 13 of "The Canadian Navy Chronicle 1939-1945".

HMCS Sackville is a Long Forecastle Flower Corvette, one of more than 120 corvettes built in Canada during the Second World War. She was commissioned in 1941 and escorted convoys from St. John's to Londonderry in Northern Ireland from 1942 to 1944. In August 1942, in a west-bound convoy 250 nautical miles east of Newfoundland, Sackville encountered a U-boat on the surface. The corvette fired a star shell and the U-boat crash-dived. Sackville accelerated, drove into the swirl of water and fired a pattern of depth charges that literally threw the U-boat to the surface. She slipped back into the water and disappeared. Sackville was credited with a 'probable kill'. Ninety minutes later, Sackville engaged another surface U-boat in a lethal ballet. Sackville zipped to ram and the U-boat zagged to avoid, but Sackville got one good 4-inch shell away, punching a large hole in the base of the conning tower. Sackville was credited with a 'possibly damaged'. She is the only surviving Flower Class Corvette anywhere in the world and is on display at Halifax, Nova Scotia.

"For gallantry and undaunted devotion to duty."

"Lieutenant Cook, Mine Disposal Officer temporarily appointed to the Staff of the Senior British Naval Officer, Suez Canal Area, recovered a German parachute mine (at Tousom, near Ismailia, Egypt) on 29th February 1941. There were no service divers available to attach the pressure horn. Lieutenant Cook therefore pulled the mine into shallow water with a net, and then himself took out the fuze under water. He then had the mine taken by lorry to a safe place in the desert, and after gaining permission from the Senior British Naval Officer, proceeded to dismantle it in the hope of getting useful information by the recovery of the magnetic or acoustic element.

After five days of careful trepanning of the case, he exposed the booby trap detonator. He then removed this and pulled off the rear door by remote control.

This is the first time since the beginning of the war that a ground mine laid in water deep enough to arm it has ever been successfully recovered and stripped. All other attempts have failed, two with severe loss of life. Lieutenant Cook must have been well aware of the extraordinary risks he was running. Taking the fuze out under water must have been a very trying experience requiring the highest degree of courage and control while the subsequent stripping was clearly done with careful persistence and courage.

Lieutenant Cook was sent to the Mediterranean for Bomb Disposal Duties. That he has dealt with mines after only being taught enough to enable him to identify a mine, and has taken the pains to learn the details of these intricate mechanisms add much to the merit of his performance in successfully carrying out very dangerous work of the highest importance in the face of the greatest difficulties."

COOK, George Douglas, Lieutenant, GM - BAR to George Medal (GM*) - RCNVR - Awarded as per London Gazette or 10 February 1942 (no Canada Gazette).

"A mine was dropped on shore at Haifa and Lieutenant Cook took charge of the disposal of it. He identified it as a type that has a series of devices meant to explode if it is not fully immersed as a mine. Since it had not exploded, he suspected that some defect had developed which might rectify itself of its own accord or through incautious interference. Therefore, he decided not to risk moving it but to strip it on the spot. The area was ordered cleared next day. Some 14,000 people were affected and the site was sandbagged and a tent put up over the mine. The complicated operation of stripping the mine took Lieutenant Cook three and a half hours of patient work, part of it done in total darkness, since this type of mine has an explosive device sensitive to light, with the knowledge that if he made one mistake, he would have no warning and no chance of escape."

Home: Toronto, Ontario.

CUMMINGS, William Alfred, V-947, Stk 1/cl, RCNVR, MID~[9.9.44]

"For courage, resolution and devotion to duty in HMCS Haida in action with enemy destroyers in rescuing survivors from HMCS Athabaskan."

HMCS Haida dropped her cutter to allow survivors from HMCS Athabaskan to climb into it. Just as it was being lowered, Stoker First Class William Alfred Cummings, Able Seaman Jack Hannan (who was not decorated), and Leading Seaman William Arthur McClure (MID) decided to go with it. They picked up six survivors from HMCS Athabaskan and two members of HMCS Haida who had fallen from the rescue nets and then made their way back to England (from "Tales of the North Atlantic").

While on patrol in the Bay of Biscay Patrol area at 1300 Hours on 27 August 1943, HMCS Athabaskan was attacked by eighteen enemy Dornier-217s. HMS Egret (British Sloop) was sunk. A glide bomb hit HMCS Athabaskan at the junction of "B" gun-deck and the wheel-house. It passed under the plot room, through the Chief Petty Officer's Mess, and out the starboard side. It exploded barely a few feet beyond and bomb fragments pierced HMCS Athabaskan's side and bridge in a number of places. HMCS Athabaskan continued on at 14 knots, correcting a serious list to starboard. The ship sailed into port on 30 August 1943 under her own power. The ship was battered but not broken. See the book "Unlucky Lady".
